The home building industry concluded several years ago that the public wanted an opportunity to look at new housing to see modern up-to-date products and building techniques. The HBA wanted to develop a way that people could see the latest in products and building techniques with no restraints... be allowed to browse... to look at landscaping, room arrangements... to obtain ideas for their present homes or for a future one...an opportunity to compare floor plans. The Parade of Homes provides these opportunities all around the Miami Valley and there is no charge to tour these homes. Visitors can tour homes ranging in price from 175,000 to over $1.1 million. Visit only the homes you want to see, or visit them all and see all the different styles and amenities. This tour will also give buyers the opportunity to visit new developments and see which area of town they might like to build their new home. If you're looking at building a new home, you won't have a better opportunity to see so many new homes in different locations and actually talk to the builders than the 2009 Spring Parade of Homes.
